CONSTITUTIONAL LAW

Constitution-Making under UN Auspices

Fostering Dependency in Sovereign Lands

Vijayashri Sripathi is visiting scholar, University of Toledo, Ohio, USA. She previously taught at the University of Toronto, Canada.

Post 1960, all colonies enjoyed the right to sculpt their own constitutions without international assistance. Yet, from 1960 to 2018, over 40 poor sovereign states have adopted with United Nations Constitutional Assistance (UNCA), the Western liberal constitution. Why? This first comprehensive study on UNCA shows that UNCA works ostensibly to 'modernize' poor states, helping to create an investor-friendly environment that largely benefits powerful transnational interests, only to secure debt-relief. Thus, the political control that these states experienced as colonies continues in this post-colonial era in a different form.

Balanced Constitutionalism

Courts and Legislatures in India and the United Kingdom

Chintan Chandrachud is an associate at the London office of Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan LLP. He holds a PhD from the University of Cambridge, UK.

This book examines the promise of the new model against its performance in practice by comparing judicial review under the HRA to an exemplar of the old model of judicial review, that is, the Indian Constitution. It argues that although the HRA fosters a more balanced allocation of powers between legislatures and courts than the Indian Constitution, it does so for a novel reason. Balanced constitutionalism is not achieved through the legislative rejection of judicial decision-making about rights. Instead, the nature of the remedy under the HRA enables British courts to assert their genuine interpretations of rights in situations in which Indian courts find it difficult to do so.

Free Speech under the Indian Constitution

Gautam Bhatia is advocate, High Court of Delhi, and visiting faculty, West Bengal National University of Juridical Sciences, Kolkata, India.

This book explores Indian free speech jurisprudence from a doctrinal, comparative, and philosophical perspective. It examines issues relating to public order, sedition, obscenity and pornography, hate speech, film and online censorship, privacy and defamation, the contempt of court, the nature of speech and the relationship between free speech and economic structure, and the inter-relationships between them.

Comparative Constitutionalism in South Asia

Sunil Khilnani (ed.) is Avantha Professor and director, King's India Institute, London, UK; Vikram Raghavan (ed.) is Lead Counsel, Legal Vice-Presidency, World Bank, Washington, DC, USA; and Arun K. Thiruvengadam (ed.) is associate professor, School of Policy and Governance, Azim Premji University, Bengaluru, India.

South Asian countries, despite diverse histories and politics, share a uniformity in terms of constitutionalism. Of late, legal communities in these countries are increasingly reacting to and engaging with constitutional law developments in the neighbouring countries of the region. This pioneering volume maps out the intellectual and historical contours of this nascent but significant development: the mutual borrowing, citing, and dialogue across the constitutional jurisdictions of South Asia.

What does it mean for education to be a fundamental right, added to the Indian Constitution as Article 21A, and how may children benefit from it? The book identifies justiciability as the most important feature of Article 21A, meaning that children and their parents must be provided with means to effectively claim their right from the State, otherwise, it would remain a ‘right’ only on paper.

The book highlights how lack of access to Indian judiciary means that justiciability remains unfulfilled. It deals with possible alternative means the State may provide for the poor to claim the benefits under Article 21A, and identifies the grievance-redress mechanism created by the Right to Education Act as a potential system of enforcement.

Florian Matthey-Prakash worked extensively on Indian constitutional law as a researcher. He, now, works as a judge in Germany.

Working a Democratic Constitution

A History of the Indian Experience

Granville Austin, a former State Department official, is a Washington-based writer on international affairs.

This important book offers critical insights into four decades of the Indian Constitution. It charts the course of constitutional reforms in India from the euphoric idealism of the post-Independence period, through the crisis years of the Emergency, and up to the early 1990s.

The Indian Constitution

Cornerstone of a Nation

Granville Austin, a former State Department official, is a Washington-based writer on international affairs.

'took the world of scholarship by storm.'

—A.G. Noorani in Frontline

The Indian Constitution provides a history of the Indian Constituent Assembly, of how and why the members of the Assembly wrote their Constitution as they did. This new edition of Austin's classic work has a preface bringing it up to date with contemporary developments in constitutional law.

Presidential Discretion

Debtoru Chatterjee is a senior civil servant working with the Government of India.

Despite donning a constitutional mantle that essentially binds a president to accept cabinet advice in exercising all the powers formally bestowed by the Constitution, the president of India can, in extraordinary circumstances, exercise discretion in the choice of a prime minister, acceptance of cabinet advice, dismissal of a government, and dissolution of Parliament, among other such privileges. This book examines the scope and limitations of these discretionary powers through various examples from Indian and British constitutional histories. The volume draws on biographical materials of Indian presidents and British sovereigns to explain how diverse political situations were tackled by them, the lessons from which can be unmistakable signposts for the future.

CORPORATE LAW

Law and Regulation of Public Offering of Corporate Securities

Raghvendra K. Singh is an advocate practising adversarial and transactional law in Delhi with specialization in taxation, securities, and commercial laws. In the past, he practised capital markets and securities law for several years at one of the leading law firms in India. Raghvendra has a degree in BA LLB (hons) from National Law School of India University, Bangalore, India, where he received the gold medal in taxation law.

Shailendra K. Singh is an advocate practising adversarial and transactional law with a focus on corporate, securities, and commercial laws. He is an associate at S&R Associates, one of the leading law firms of India, and has previously worked with the counsel for the Securities and Exchange Board of India. Shailendra has a degree in BA LLB (Hons) from Chanakya National Law University, Patna, India.

The book is a comprehensive exposition of the law and regulation of public offering of corporate securities. The authors examine and explain the concept of 'public offering' of securities; the legal setting in which public offering is undertaken and the mechanics of such transactions; the potential liability of different parties such as issuer company, its promoters and directors, and securities market intermediaries involved in public offerings; and the remedies that are available to investors.

COMPARITIVE LAW

Competition Law Today

Second Edition

Concepts, Issues, and the Law in Practice

Vinodh Dhall (ed.) heads the competition law practice at Talwar, Thakore and Associates. Competition law has witnessed phenomenal growth in recent years, especially since the early 1990s. As an increasing number of countries have undertaken economic and reforms and embraced the market economy, many of them have introduced competition law to maintain competition in their markets.

This book provides an overview of the competition law regime with particular focus on India. It broadly covers the history, objectives, and substantive provisions of law, its relationship with regulated sectors of the market, the economics of law, its international dimension, and competition law in developing countries. The second edition provides an updated account of law and incorporates changes that have taken place since the publication of the first edition. It includes two new chapters: 'Reviewing Competition Regime in Pakistan' and 'Merger Control Regime under the Competition Law in India'.

Balanced Constitutionalism

Courts and Legislatures in India and the United Kingdom

Chintan Chandrachud, associate, London office of Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan LLP, UK. The Human Rights Act (HRA) of the UK, 1998, unlike systems of parliamentary sovereignty and judicial supremacy, promised a new, 'balanced' model for the protection of rights, which conferred courts with limited power of review over legislation. This book examines the promise of the new model against its performance in practice by comparing judicial review under the HRA to an exemplar of the old model of judicial review, the Indian Constitution.

HUMAN RIGHTS & CIVIL LIBERTIES

Child Rights in India

Third Edition

Law, Policy, and Practice

Asha Bajpai is founder dean and professor of law at the School of Law, Rights and Constitutional Governance, Tata Institute of Social Sciences, Mumbai, Maharashtra, India.

Child Rights in India analyses the laws in the light of court judgments and policy initiatives taken in India. It also examines the interventions and strategies employed by non-governmental organizations in recommending legislative reforms in support of children.

This fully revised third edition focuses on the new legal developments in India, such as the Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act, 2015; the new Central Adoption Resource Agency guidelines; the Right of Children to Free and Compulsory Education Act, 2009; and the National Food Security Act, 2013. The book thus attempts to integrate the law in theory and field practice.

The Contradiction in Disability Law

Selective Abortions and Rights

Smitha Nizar teaches law at Alliance School of Law, Bengaluru, India.

This book is an attempt to explicate the unproblematic perception towards disability selective abortions. It attempts to demonstrate the wrongness of 'selective' abortions, but without entering the realm of a women's right to take decisions about her body. It analyses the legitimacy of automatic decision taken to abort the foetus, once diagnosed with disability. Whilst the Indian legislation on prenatal tests, the Prenatal Diagnostic Techniques Act, 1994, prohibits the use of prenatal tests for sex-selection, it permits the use of very same tests to select out foetus with disabilities. Moreover, the Medical Termination of Pregnancy Act, 1971, permits termination of such lives. Thus, disability selection entails eliminating life with disabilities.

Does this legal position of disability selective abortion import that persons with disabilities still do not deserve to be born as their lives are not worth living? Does disability selective abortion in some manner negate the rights of persons with disabilities? Can this technology be carried forward without breaching disability rights? The existing literature makes a case that even though sex or other selective abortions are not promoted, yet, as part of technological growth, disability selective abortions are unproblematically permitted. Prenatal tests and disability selective abortion, disguised as a sophisticated manner of preventing the existence of human life, completely contradicts their rights, dignity, and equal value as human beings.

Legal Education (Vol. 4)

This is a set of four volumes intended at documenting the evolution of Upendra Baxi's thoughts and writings over more than four decades as an academic as well as a social and human rights activist. This set will critically engage with the work of one of the foremost legal scholar from India. The four volumes will bring together the essays and lectures, excluding only the monographs, of Upendra Baxi on the major themes of his writings—human rights, constitutionalism, law and society, and legal education.

Upendra Baxi, was professor of law at the University of Delhi, India, from 1973 to 1994 (and Professor Emeritus since 2010), and professor of law at the University of Warwick, UK, from 1994 (and an Emeritus since 2009). He is an honorary professor of the National Law School of India University (Bangalore); the National Academy of Legal Studies and Research (NALSAR, Hyderabad); the National Law University (Delhi); and the Gujarat National Law University (Gandhinagar), India.

The Informal Constitution

Unwritten Criteria in Selecting Judges for the Supreme Court of India

Abhinav Chandrachud, advocate, Bombay High Court, Mumbai, India. This book’s central thesis is that despite all established formal constitutional requirements, there are three informal criteria which are used for appointing judges to the court: age, seniority, and diversity. The author examines debates surrounding the Indian judicial system since the institution of the federal court during the British Raj. This leads up to a study of the political developments that resulted in the present ‘collegium system’ of appointing judges to the Supreme Court of India. Based on more than two dozen interviews personally conducted by the author with former judges of the Supreme Court of India, this book uniquely brings to the fore the unwritten criteria that have determined the selection of judges to the highest court of law in this country for over six decades.

Corporations and Disability Rights

Bridging the Digital Divide

Neha Pathakji teaches at NALSAR University of Law, Hyderabad, India. Corporations and Disability Rights engages with the contemporary discourse on the nature of the right to access the Internet and contextualizes this right within the framework of emerging disability rights jurisprudence. This book explores the interplay between human rights of persons with disabilities and corporate obligation in a technologically advanced society. It argues that under disability rights jurisprudence, the right to access the Internet is a human right and not merely an enabling right. It bridges the existing normative and regulatory gaps for the effective realization of the right to access the Internet.

Appointment of Judges to the Supreme Court of India

Transparency, Accountability, and Independence

Arghya Sengupta (ed.) is founder and research director at Vidhi Centre for Legal Policy, New Delhi, India; Ritwika Sharma (ed.) is research fellow at Vidhi Centre for Legal Policy, New Delhi, India.

In Supreme Court Advocates-on-Record Association v Union of India, the Supreme Court of India, by majority, struck down the National Judicial Appointments Commission (NJAC), which was established to appoint judges to the Supreme Court of India and high courts.

Unsurprisingly, the NJAC judgment has been the subject of a deeply polarized debate in the public sphere and academia. This volume, comprising 26 essays, analyses the NJAC judgment and provides a rich context to it in terms of philosophical, comparative, and constitutional issues that underpin it. The book traces the history of judicial appointments in India, analyses constitutional principles behind selecting judges and their application in the NJAC case, and comparatively examines the judicial appointments process in six select countries—United Kingdom, South Africa, Pakistan, Sri Lanka, Bangladesh, and Nepal—enquiring into what makes a good judge and an effective appointments process.

Supreme Court of India

The Beginnings

George H. Gadbois, Jr (1936–2017), a close observer of the Indian Supreme Court, taught political science at the University of Kentucky, USA; Vikram Raghavan (ed.) is a private scholar of Indian constitutional law and history; Vasujith Ram (ed.) is pursuing a master’s degree at Harvard Law School, USA.

A leading expert on Indian judiciary, George H. Gadbois Jr offers a compelling biography of the Supreme Court of India, a powerful institution. Written and researched when he was a graduate student in the 1960s, this book provides the first comprehensive account of the Court’s foundations and early years. Gadbois opens with Hari Singh Gour’s proposal in 1921 to establish an indigenous ultimate court of appeal. After analysing events preceding the Federal Court’s creation under the Government of India Act, 1935, Gadbois explores the Court’s largely overlooked role and record. He pays particular attention to the history and practice of judicial appointments in India.

The book is an institutional tour de force beginning with the Federal Court’s establishment in December 1937, through the Supreme Court’s inauguration in January 1950, and until the death of Jawaharlal Nehru in May 1964.

The tremendous powers that the high courts and the Supreme Court of India wield bestow a huge responsibility on them. Building on this, the book argues that judges must be made accountable of their personal conduct and integrity as well as of the judicial verdicts they deliver. It critically discusses Articles 141, 142, and 144 of the Constitution of India, which make the Supreme Court the most powerful institution in the country, and Articles 32 and 136, which also confer wide powers upon it. Using these powers, the apex court sometimes tends to pass orders that lack the scope for implementation. The book suggests measures to strengthen the integrity, independence, and impartiality of the Supreme Court.

The Right to Sanitation has been recognized in India for more than two decades, and progressively integrated into the international human rights law framework since the beginning of the century. Courts in India have derived this right from the constitutional right to life and repeatedly affirmed its existence. However, key issues persist concerning the realization of the right to sanitation for all.

This book conceptually engages with the right to sanitation and its multiple dimensions in India, as well as its broader international and comparative setting. It critically analyses the contributions of the law and policy framework in the realization of the right in India.

Despite the critical role played by the Supreme Court of India, the lives of the judges have never been studied before. This seminal book presents biographical essays for each of the first 93 judges who served on the court from 1950 through mid-1989.

The essays in the book are based on interviews the author conducted with 64 of the 68 judges who were alive in the 1980s, and on meetings and correspondence with family members or relatives, friends, and associates of the deceased judges. An attempt is made to account for why certain judges rather than others were chosen—the selection criteria employed and, to the extent possible in a secretive selection environment, to identify those who selected them. It concludes with a collective portrait of these judges, paying particular attention to changes in their background characteristics—fathers' occupation, education, pre-SCI career, caste, religion, state of birth, and region over four decades. The essays also embrace their post-retirement activities.

This will be an invaluable reference book for teachers and students of law as well as judges and advocates. Scholars and students from the disciplines of sociology, political science, as well as journalists and general readers will also find the book useful.

George H. Gadbois, Jr was former Professor Emeritus of Political Science, University of Kentucky, USA.

The Cunning of Rights

Law, Life, Biocultures

Rajshree Chandra is senior visiting fellow at the Centre for Policy Research, New Delhi, India. She also teaches political science at Janki Devi Memorial College, University of Delhi, India.

This book is about how rights get 'framed' within and by law in the context of biotech innovations. In particular, it is about 'biocultural entitlements'—of small farming communities, local indigenous communities, healers, peasants, in short, of people at some distance from the global networks of trade, politics, and science and technology. As newer forms of intellectual property—in seeds, germplasm, genetic resources, plant varieties—are made possible through advancements in biotechnology, new entitlements, claims, and imaginations of citizenship are being bred, almost mimicking the hybrid culture of genetic configurations. This book tries to understand these new forms of property and rights that flow from them, for their changed architecture indicate not just an altered metaphysics of property but also inscribe themselves in the politics of genetic resources.

ENVIRONMENTAL LAW

Energy Law and Policy

Usha Tandon is professor of environmental law, population law, and gender justice at Campus Law Centre, University of Delhi, India.

Energy Law and Policy provides a constructive understanding of energy law, a relatively new area in the discourse of environmental law. It argues the importance of looking into existing legal imperatives to frame a robust and comprehensive legal framework on renewable energy at national and international levels.

In this volume, leading energy law experts shed light on crucial aspects of energy law, such as the linkages between energy and sustainable development, energy trade, energy tax, and intellectual property rights in clean energy. Providing a comparative perspective, the volume discusses domestic laws of India, China, Mauritius, and Nigeria, and links the legal instruments developed by environmental law to an energy regime where economic motives dominate and differ across nations, depending on the availability of their natural resources.

Biocultural Rights and the Conservation of Environment

Giulia Sajeve is an independent researcher based out of Italy with expertise in political science and law.

For the last one-and-a half decades, energy has emerged at the forefront of sustainable development. This volume, with essays by leading energy law experts, seeks to contribute to the understanding of some important aspects of energy law such as global climate governance, energy trade, energy justice, energy tax, the linkages between energy and sustainable development, and energy and natural resources. Providing a comparative perspective, it discusses domestic laws of Mauritius, Nigeria, China, and India on energy conservation, clean renewable energy and nuclear energy. It also attempts to link the legal instruments developed by environmental law to an energy regime where economic motives dominate and differ across nations, depending on the availability of their natural resources.

Water Law in India

Second Edition

An Introduction to Legal Instruments

Philippe Cullet (ed.) is professor of International and Environmental Law, and Sujith Koonan (ed.) is a doctoral candidate, both at SOAS, University of London, UK.

This book offers a comprehensive survey of the legal instruments concerning water in India. It presents a variety of national and state-level instruments that make up the complex and diverse field of water law and policy. This edition includes the draft National Water Framework Bill, 2016, and the Model

Groundwater (Sustainable Management) Act, 2016; new water-related instruments in fields as criminal law, land acquisition law, and rural employment legislation; and a chapter on international legal instruments. It fills a critical gap in the study of water law, providing a rich reference point for the entire gamut of legal mechanisms available in India.

Triple Talaq

Examining Faith

Salman Khurshid is a senior advocate in the Supreme Court of India. He is the former Cabinet Minister of External Affairs, Law and Justice, and Corporate Affairs, Government of India.

In Triple Talaq: Examining Faith, Salman Khurshid, who intervened to offer the court an amicus brief in the 'Triple Talaq case', offers a straightforward yet comprehensive overview of this complicated issue. Explaining the reasons behind the court's decision, he dives deep into other aspects of this practice: why it is wrong; why it has thrived; what was the judicial history of this issue; what the Quran and Muslim religious leaders say about it; and what the comparative practices in other countries are. A handy guide to this landmark decision and what it means for Muslims in India, this book is written not just for the theologian, but also for the common reader.

Filing Religion

State, Hinduism, and Courts of Law

Daniela Berti, Gilles Tarabout, and Raphaël Voix (eds) are social anthropologists and associated with the National Centre for Scientific Research, Paris, France. Berti is also a member of the Centre for Himalayan Studies, Villejuif, France; Tarabout is a member of the Laboratoire d'Ethnologie et de Sociologie Comparative, Nanterre, France; and Voix is a member of the Center for Indian and South Asian Studies, Paris, France.

This volume explores how the apparently 'technical'-legalistic action taking place in the courts of law significantly shapes the place that Hinduism occupies in Indian and Nepalese societies. The book adopts a resolutely historical and anthropological approach, which considers law as part of social, religious, and political dynamics.

The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act (PWDVA) came into force in October 2006. Conflict in the Shared Household takes stock of the progress made towards achieving the objectives of the PWDVA during the first decade of its implementation. It examines the nature of structural inequality that perpetuates and condones domestic violence as a lesser ‘wrong’ and traces the history of the fight against domestic violence in India.

The essays discuss critical issues such as right to residence, marital rape, rights of cohabitees or relationship in the nature of marriage, secular nature of the PWDVA, and its harmonious existence with personal law and criminal law.

Hindu Law

Beyond Tradition and Modernity

Werner F. Menski is professor at the School of Law, School of African and Asian Studies, University of London, UK.

'big, but accessible, written with immense verve, panache and ambition. ...The importance of this book transcends agreement or disagreement with its central thesis. ...Compulsory reading on Hindu law.'

—The Hindu

In this major work, one of the world's leading authorities on the subject argues that, regardless of contestations to the contrary, Hindu Law remains a living entity. Complex, essentially flexible, and constantly evolving, it has reached a stage of postmodernity.

This book critically analyses the development of Hindu Law from the ancient period to its emergence as a postmodern phenomenon in the twenty-first century. The author uses comparative social theory literature to establish that Hindu law must be viewed both as an ancient, constantly evolving conceptual entity and a living legal system.

'This significant book analyses with marvelous felicity how judicial processes inscribe further violence on victimized bodies, the work of "compromise" in rape trials, and the way "atrocities" cases erase sexual violence.' —Uma Chakravarti, feminist historian based in Delhi, India

'This important and timely ethnography shows despite efforts at reform, everyday court practices exacerbate the violence and humiliation endured by victims of sexual violence.' —Sally Engle Merry, professor, Department of Anthropology, New York University, USA

Sexual violence in general, and rape in particular, is under-reported in India. The social stigma associated with rape is the biggest hurdle that a rape survivor faces right from the time of reporting the matter to the police to the stage of trial. This book, one of the first ethnographic studies of rape trials in India, focusses on the everyday socio-legal processes that underlie the making of rape trials.

The work centres around four extended case studies in a trial court in Ahmedabad. These case studies show how the effects of power and knowledge congeal to disqualify women's (and children's) testimonies at different sites of state law such as the police station, the forensic science laboratory, the hospital, and the court. This book describes multiple ways in which public secrecy is subjected to specific revelations in rape trials that do not bring justice to a rape survivor but address and reinforce deeply entrenched phallogocentric notions of justice.

Women and Law in India

Third Edition

Flavia Agnes (ed.) is a women's rights lawyer; Sudhir Chandra (ed.) is an independent historian; and Monmayee Basu (ed.) teaches in the Department of History, University of Delhi, India.

This omnibus brings together three significant works on gender equality, which comprehensively analyse key issues including women's rights, social justice, and empowerment. Together, the books span legal change in India over two centuries when women's rights were negotiated, rewritten, and coded. In doing so, they provide a comprehensive and significant understanding of why progressive laws, once passed, continue to be implemented in such a limited manner. They highlight the fact that legislations in the past 50 years have not brought gender equality in any real sense.

Alternative Dispute Resolution

The Indian Perspective

Shashank Garg is a partner in Advani & Company, New Delhi, India.

Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) is a mechanism to resolve disputes outside the courtroom through mediation, arbitration, negotiation, and conciliation. As a departure from the traditional adversarial system of dispensing justice, which is expensive, slow, and often ineffective, ADR provides the panacea of early resolution of disputes to the warring parties.

This book provides an insight into the contemporary aspects of the law and practice of ADR in India. The volume, with contributions from eminent experts, sheds light on the usage of the best practices of dispute resolution in India, and answers complex legal questions related to ADR. It equips the readers to understand the challenges associated with the ever-increasing ADR mechanism, and addresses issues that have emerged following the enactment of the Arbitration and Conciliation (Amendment) Act, 2015.

JURISPRUDENCE

Rule of Law in India

A Quest for Reason

Harish Narasappa is the founding partner of Samvad Partners, a pan-India law firm and co-founder of DAKSH, an NGO.

A study of rule of law is not only a study of a country's legal and political system, but also that of its society as a whole. Despite being used in the political and legal discourse regularly, there has been no effort to identify the meaning and contours of rule of law. The book is a study of how India is socially, politically, and legally organized in terms of its governing institutions, and the interaction of its people with these institutions. The primary goal is to understand and explain the obvious dichotomy that exists in India's rule of law. On the one hand, institutions and laws required for the proper functioning of the country in accordance with rule of law exist on paper, more or less, in accordance with the constitutional mandate. On the other, most of these governing institutions do not function properly and lack the processes, systems, values, and people to function efficiently, and, more importantly, in accordance with law. This book attempts to identify the broad contours of an Indian theory of rule of law.

Dignity in the Legal and Political Philosophy of Ronald Dworkin

Salman Khurshid (ed.) is a former Union Minister of External Affairs, Law and Justice, and Minority Affairs, Government of India.

Lokendra Malik (ed.) is advocate, Supreme Court of India.

Veronica Rodriguez-Blanco (ed.) is professor of Moral and Political Philosophy (Jurisprudence), Surrey Centre for Law and Philosophy, School of Law, University of Surrey, UK.

Ronald Dworkin (1931–2013), an American legal philosopher, jurist, and scholar, was a stalwart advocate of human rights and dignity who developed a formidable scholarly combination of law and moral integrity. He propounded some of the most influential theories of law and morality in modern jurisprudence.

This volume explores his thoughts on dignity where self-respect and authenticity play a key role. It also sheds light on contemporary judicial and moral conundrums, such as freedom of speech, freedom of religion, and the complex relationship between dignity, human will, and responsibility. The book, with contributions from eminent philosophers and thinkers from across the world, provides a detailed analysis of Dworkin's work on dignity. Each essay in the volume interprets his rich jurisprudential work, and motivates legal philosophers, practitioners, and judges to understand, practise, and disseminate Dworkin's jurisprudential thoughts.

The contemporary Indian legal system owes its origin to the English common law system. However, this system has failed to perform optimally owing to its significant incompatibility with existing Indian traditions. Taking into account indigenously created and evolved legal apparatuses, this volume examines all aspects of the Indian legal system in the context of historical, sociological, and anthropological realities of society.

Postulating that legal systems cannot be seen or studied in isolation from the cultures of groups whose affairs they regulate, this book explores the preference for non-state legal practices among several communities in India, despite the existence of a formal state legal system.

Understanding Jurisprudence

Fifth Edition

An Introduction to Legal Theory

Raymond Wacks is Emeritus Professor of Law and Legal Theory at University of Hong Kong, China.

Raymond Wacks brings legal theory to life through his lucid and entertaining style. The author has crafted a manageable guide, balancing concise introductions to the key theorists and core issues such as punishment and rights without ignoring the subtleties of the subject.

Seminal quotes from leading scholars are included to help students recognize the impact of their work, while extensive further reading suggestions at the end of each chapter invite students to explore the broad range of literature available on central topics. Each chapter concludes with a series of critical questions designed to encourage reader to think analytically about the law and the key debates which surround it.

Violent Modernities

Cultural Lives of Law in the New India

Oishik Sircar is assistant professor, Jindal Global Law School, O.P. Jindal Global University, Sonapat, India.

Law and violence are generally thought to share an antithetical relationship in liberalism. Lawlessness is understood to produce violence, and law is invoked and deployed as a means to resist and undo the violence of lawlessness. This book looks at the cultural dimensions of contemporary India through the lens of critical jurisprudence to offer a counter-intuitive exploration of the relationship between law and violence.

Free Speech under the Indian Constitution

Gautam Bhatia is advocate, High Court of Delhi, and visiting faculty, West Bengal National University of Juridical Sciences, Kolkata, India.

This book explores Indian free speech jurisprudence from a doctrinal, comparative, and philosophical perspective. Taking as its point of departure the constitutional guarantee of the freedom of speech and expression—Articles 19(1)(a) and 19(2) of the Constitution of India—it discusses, clause by clause, the development of law from colonial times to present-day controversies. It examines issues relating to public order, sedition, obscenity and pornography, hate speech, film and online censorship, privacy and defamation, the contempt of court, the nature of speech and the relationship between free speech and economic structure, and the inter-relationships between them.

Idea and Methods of Legal Research unearths how the thinking process is to be streamlined in research, how a theme is built on the basis of comprehensive and intensive study. The book explains the meaning, evolution, and scope of legal research and discusses objectivity and ethics in legal research. It engages with the requirements, advantages, and limits of various doctrinal and non-doctrinal methods and tools, and the points to be considered in selecting a suitable method. The book also discusses the use of multi-method legal research, policy research, action research, and feminist legal research and reflects on research-based critical legal writing. It is a comprehensive answer to key questions one faces in legal research.

After being sued by more than 20 foreign investors, India terminated close to 60 investment treaties and adopted a new model Bilateral Investment Treaty (BIT) purportedly to balance investment protection with the host state's right to regulate. This book is a critical study of India's approach towards BITs. It traces their origin, evolution, and the current state of play. Unlike earlier when India's approach towards BITs and policy towards foreign investment were consistent with each other, post 2010, the approach to BITs has become protectionist while India's foreign investment policy continues to be liberal. India now needs to evolve its BIT practice based on the twin frameworks of international rule of law and embedded liberalism.

Indian Political Trials 1775–1947

A.G. Noorani is advocate at the Supreme Court of India, and a leading constitutional expert.

Throughout history, judicial trials have been used for political ends, both by persons in power as well as those who seek power or accountability from wielders of power. Whatever the aim of the state in instituting them, political trials tend to become forums for its opponents and landmarks in the quest of truth, freedom, and justice. This book, in which the author combines his well-known legal acumen with extensive archival research, is a study of famous political trials in India chosen for their historical and political significance. This edition includes the trial of Maharaja Nand Kumar, of Aurobindo Ghose, of Bal Gangadhar Tilak in 1916 when he was defended by Mohammad Ali Jinnah, and the Meerut Conspiracy case, along with the other famous trials such as those of Mahatma Gandhi, Maulana Azad, the INA leaders, and Sheikh Abdullah covered in the original. Each chapter is full of intriguing details sourced from such documentation as official trial records, memoirs of personalities involved, newspapers reports, and books of the times.

MEDICO LEGAL

Medicine and Law

K. Kannan is a judge at the High Court of Punjab and Haryana, Chandigarh, India.

In the course of practising medicine, a range of issues may arise that need a legal solution. As a result, the application of law to the field of medical practice has become increasingly important and this has further been strengthened by contemporary developments relating to law and ethics, medical malpractice and bio-ethics, and regulatory requirements for the health care industry.

With a comprehensive introduction and an appraisal of the Indian medical education system, this work examines a variety of issues that challenge the legal and medical fraternity in the face of rapidly advancing medical technology. It addresses issues such as organ transplant, euthanasia, surrogacy, abortion, the concept of consent, sex selection, clinical trials, designer babies, cosmetic enhancement procedures, and confidentiality. Adopting an interdisciplinary approach, the author provides a comparative study with special focus on Indian case law and jurisdictions from other countries including the US and the UK.

Law and Social Transformation in India

Oliver Mendelsohn is emeritus scholar, La Trobe University, Australia.

This work uncovers the historical roots and also the contemporary character of law and society in India. Steeped in years of fieldwork in both rural and urban India, the work places the new legal forces and processes introduced into India by the British alongside those that predated the colonial incursion and still have vitality today.

Indian law is now undergoing a period of comparatively rapid change. Globalization has brought dynamism to some of the law firms of India, particularly in Mumbai, and this impact is considered here. There is growing impatience with the slowness and inefficiencies of the courts—though, contrary to much opinion, litigation is seen here to be declining rather than growing. Meanwhile, there has been cumulatively dramatic change to authority in the countryside.

The great flagship of Indian law continues to be the uniquely activist Supreme Court and its public interest litigation, but equally intriguing are the group-based and sometimes law-like activities of washer-folk in rural Rajasthan, diamond traders in downtown Mumbai, and the myriad communities in the great 'slums' of urban India. These are the themes taken up in this volume.

The Conflict of Laws in India

Second Edition

Inter-Territorial and Inter-Personal Conflict

V.C. Govindaraj is former professor of law, Faculty of Law, University of Delhi, India.

Private international law or conflict of laws deals with cases that have cross-border implications. The question involved is which state has the jurisdiction to decide a case involving complex inter-territorial issues.

Judges of the superior courts in India lean heavily on English case-law and on the views of renowned English jurists, such as Dicey and Cheshire, in deciding cases on conflict of laws.

This book provides an in-depth overview of private international law, a hugely under-researched discipline. It contains leading cases dealing with private international law.

The Due Process of Law

Lord Alfred Denning, Baron Denning
Two central themes run through The Due Process of Law. The first is the workings of the various ‘measures authorized by the law so as to keep the streams of justice pure’—that is to say, contempt of court, judicial inquiries, and powers of arrest and search. The second is the recent development of family law, focussing particularly on Lord Denning’s contribution to the law of husband and wife. These broad themes are elaborated through a discussion of Lord Denning’s own judgments and opinions on a wide range of topics.

Landmarks in the Law

Lord Alfred Denning, Baron Denning
Written in Lord Denning’s familiar vivid, staccato style, Landmarks in the Law discusses cases and characters whose names will be known to all readers, grouped together under headings such as High Treason, Freedom of the Press, and Murder. Thus, for example, the chapter on High Treason tells the stories of Sir Walter Raleigh, Sir Roger Casement, and William Joyce—three very different cases, the first occurring nearly 350 years before the last, but each one raising constitutional issues of the greatest importance.

What Next In the Law

Lord Alfred Denning, Baron Denning
Lord Denning draws from a wide range of sources to support his arguments and incorporates coverage of many different cases, including that of the Russell baby, the Granada ‘mole’, and the case of Harriet Harman, all of which are selected on the grounds that ‘the experience of the past points the way to the future’. The book also discusses the proposals for law reform which have come from numerous royal commissions, departmental committees, and Blue Books, and which were all rejected by successive governments at the time of publication.

Tomorrow's Lawyers

Second Edition

An Introduction to Your Future

Richard Susskind OBE is an author, speaker, and independent adviser to international professional firms and national governments.

Tomorrow's Lawyers predicts that we are at the beginning of a period of fundamental transformation in law: a time in which we will see greater change than we have seen in the past two centuries. Where the future of the legal service will be a world of internet-based global businesses, online document production, commoditized service, legal process outsourcing, and web based simulation practice. Legal markets will be liberalized, with new jobs for lawyers and new employers too. This book is a definitive guide to this future—for young and aspiring lawyers, and for all who want to modernize our legal and justice systems.

9780198796633 | 2017 | Paperback | ₹845

Online Courts and the Future of Justice

Richard Susskind OBE is an author, speaker, and independent adviser to international professional firms and national governments.

In Online Courts and the Future of Justice, Richard Susskind, the world's most cited author on the future of legal services, shows how litigation will be transformed by technology and proposes a solution to the global access-to-justice problem. In most advanced legal systems, the resolution of civil disputes takes too long, costs too much, and the process is not just antiquated; it is unintelligible to ordinary mortals. The courts of some jurisdictions are labouring under staggering backlogs—100 million cases in Brazil, 30 million in India. Online courts provide 'online judging'—the determination of cases by human judges but not in physical courtrooms.

The Law of the Constitution

Albert Venn Dicey (1835–1922) was Vinerian Professor of English law at the University of Oxford, UK, and the pre-eminent constitutional lawyer of the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

John Allison (ed.) is reader in public law and comparative historical jurisprudence in the Faculty of Law, University of Cambridge, and a fellow of Queen's College, Cambridge, UK.

The Law of the Constitution has been the main doctrinal influence upon English constitutional thought since the late nineteenth century. It acquired and long retained extraordinary legal authority, despite fierce criticism and many changes in law and government. By many, it was treated as a canonical text embodying axiomatic principles, or it was simply understood as indeed the law of the Constitution; and even by its critics, it was still granted the status of orthodoxy.

The Conflict of Laws

Fourth Edition

Adrian Briggs QC is professor of private international law at the University of Oxford, and a fellow of St Edmund Hall, Oxford, UK.

This invaluable introduction to the study of the conflict of laws provides a survey and analysis of the rules of private international law as they apply in England. Written to take account of the various possible outcomes of the Brexit process, it goes as far as is possible to make sense of the effect it will have on English private international law.

The volume covers general principles, jurisdiction, and the effect of foreign judgments; the law applicable to contractual and non-contractual obligations, the private international law of property, of adults (the increasingly complex law of children is described in bare outline), and of corporations.

Comparative Constitutionalism

Albert Venn Dicey (1835–1922) was Vinerian Professor of English law at the University of Oxford, UK, and the pre-eminent constitutional lawyer of the nineteenth century.

John Allison (ed.) is reader in public law and comparative historical jurisprudence at the Faculty of Law, University of Cambridge, and a fellow of Queen's College, Cambridge, UK.

This book provides a complement to Dicey's The Law of the Constitution. These largely unpublished comparative constitutional lectures were written for different versions of a comparative constitutional book that Dicey began but did not finish prior to his death in 1922. The lectures were a pioneering venture into comparative constitutionalism and reveal an approach to legal education broader than Dicey is widely understood to have taken. Topics discussed include English, French, American, and Prussian constitutionalism; the separation of powers; representative government; and federalism.

The Settlement of Disputes in International Law Institutions and Procedures

John Collier retired as lecturer in law and fellow of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, UK, in 2001.

Vaughan Lowe, QC is Emeritus Chichele Professor of public international law and a fellow of All Souls College, UK.

Antonios Tzanakopoulos is a university lecturer in public international law at the University of Oxford and a fellow of St Anne's College, Oxford, UK.

This fully revised and updated edition provides a clear and detailed analysis of the institutions and procedures for the settlement of international disputes in the context of new developments in recent years.

The book is divided into three parts. The first part of the book examines the different methods and institutions of dispute settlement. Part two provides a comprehensive examination of procedure before an international court or tribunal. The third part focuses on the problems facing the system of international dispute settlement as a result of the proliferation of dispute resolution mechanisms, and the augmenting specialization and fragmentation of international law.

Pleadings Without Tears

Ninth Edition

A Guide to Legal Drafting Under the Civil Procedure Rules

William Rose (late), Circuit Judge, and Roger Eastman, Master of the Senior Courts, Queen's Bench Division, UK.

Master Roger Eastman was called to the Bar in 1978. He was appointed as a Deputy Queen's Bench Master in February 2003 and then as a Deputy District Judge on the South Eastern Circuit in July 2003. He was appointed a Queen's Bench Master in April 2009.

Pleadings Without Tears has become established as one of the most successful books on practical legal drafting in the context of litigation.

This new ninth edition is fully updated to take account of all Civil Procedure Rule (CPR) changes since the last edition.

The book takes a practical and insightful look at the subject of legal drafting, enabling the reader to become confident in approaching this often unnecessarily daunting subject. It focuses on core skills and fundamental rules while clearly addressing each stage of the process, and goes beyond a straightforward setting out of the precedents and authorities relevant to statements of case. Giving clear examples of how to set out relevant matters with clarity and precision, this book encourages the reader to give full consideration to concise and clear identification of the subject matter of the action, the issues of the case, and the parties' respective positions in respect to those issues.

Alisdair Gillespie, head of department and professor of law, Lancaster University, UK.

Siobhan Weare, lecturer in law, Lancaster University, UK.

This book enables students to first understand all of the key areas of the English legal system, and then to engage with the subject fully for themselves. The law is not just presented but critiqued, with a range of learning features which encourage students to actively engage with contentious issues and difficult questions. Everyday examples help students to apply their knowledge of the law in a practical way, while questions for reflection help students to analyse, evaluate, and think critically.

Aided by a clear structure, arranged in five parts, students will be able to fully grasp the processes involving in making and reforming the law.

Equity and Trusts

Third Edition

Text, Cases, and Materials

Paul S. Davies is professor of commercial law at UCL, teaching at both undergraduate and postgraduate level.

Graham Virgo, QC (Hon), is professor of English private law and senior pro-vice chancellor (education) at the University of Cambridge, a fellow of Downing College, Cambridge, and a bencher of Lincoln's Inn, UK.

This book is a comprehensive guide to trusts and equity. Drawing on a judiciously balanced selection of case extracts, journal articles, and academic writing, Davies and Virgo present their authoritative commentary on the law with clarity and rigour. The text guides students through the key legal principles of each case, utilizing supporting learning features to highlight important aspects and help develop independent research skills. 'Central Issues' boxes introduce each chapter and identify the key themes examined and scenario-based questions frame the law in a practical context.

The Right to a Fair Trial in International Law

Amal Clooney is a barrister who specializes in international law and human rights. She represents clients before international courts including the International Criminal Court, the International Court of Justice, and the European Court of Human Rights.

Philippa Webb is reader (associate professor) in public international law at the Dickson Poon School of Law, King's College, London, and a barrister at 20 Essex Street Chambers, London, UK.

This volume brings together the diverse sources of international law that define the right to a fair trial in the context of criminal proceedings. The book provides a comprehensive explanation of what the right to a fair trial means in practice under international law and focusses on factual scenarios that practitioners and judges in court face. Each of the book's 15 chapters deal with one component of the right to a fair trial as defined in Article 14 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

Brexit

What Everyone Needs to Know

David Allen Green is a journalist and lawyer. He is also the law and policy commentator for Financial Times and has a personal blog at Jack of Kent. He is also a consultant solicitor practising in commercial law, media and communications law, public law, and EU law for Preiskel & Co. LLP in the Temple, London, UK.

This book offers an accessible and unbiased guide to Brexit: the issues and events that led to the vote, the political turmoil that has resulted from it, and the crisis the UK now faces. It examines key debates over 'sovereignty', immigration, and UK's contributions to the EU. It explains the controversy surrounding Article 50 of the EU treaty: what is the process necessary for leaving the EU, and how might the UK approach the monumental task of disentangling its legal system from the EU? What might the exit agreement look like? What are the implications of 'hard' Brexit or 'soft' Brexit, or no Brexit at all?

The Oxford Handbook of International Law in Asia and the Pacific

Simon Chesterman (ed.) is dean and professor at the National University of Singapore, Faculty of Law, and editor of the Asian Journal of International Law.

Hisashi Owada (ed.) is a judge and former president of the International Court of Justice. Prior to joining the court he served as a Japanese diplomat and law professor.

Ben Saul (ed.) is Challis Chair of international law at the University of Sydney, Australia, a barrister, and an associate fellow of Chatham House

(the Royal Institute of International Affairs), UK.

There has recently been widespread scholarly and practitioner interest in international law in the Asia-Pacific region, as well as developments in the practice of states. Threats as well as opportunities have driven this present interest and these evolutions join the long-standing interest in parts of Asia (notably South Asia) in post-colonial theory and the history of international law. This book brings together pre-eminent and emerging specialists to analyse the approach to and influence of key states of the region, as well as whether truly 'Asian' trends can be identified and what this might mean for international order.

Drafting Patent and Know-How Licencing Agreements

Mark Anderson is a solicitor in private practice and a visiting lecturer at University College London, UK.

This book provides a focussed and detailed discussion of one specific type of intellectual property (IP) transaction: the patent and know-how licence agreement. It analyses and explains the legal and practical issues that arise when drafting, negotiating, and advising on this kind of agreement. The work focusses on English and European Union-wide law, considering selected differences between English law and the law in other jurisdictions, such as the United States, to illustrate the different approaches the court may take on particular issues.

Intellectual Property Law

Stavroula Karapapa, professor of intellectual property and information law, University of Reading, UK.

Luke McDonagh, senior lecturer, City Law School, University of London, UK.

This book uses a uniquely practical approach to intellectual property law: unfold the problem, reveal the law, apply to life. As each problem is explored, clear explanations reveal the central legal concepts underpinning the relevant topic. Further illustrations and references to the problem apply the law, enabling students to see for themselves how the law interacts with everyday life and business, giving them a deep and practical understanding.

Trade Marks and Competition Law

Alison Firth is a barrister at Ingenuity IP Chambers and visiting professor at Newcastle Law School, UK.

Spyros Maniatis is professor of intellectual property and director of the Centre of Commercial Law Studies at Queen Mary University of London, UK.

Professor Ioannis Kokkoris holds a chair in law and economics at the Centre for Commercial Law Studies, Queen Mary University of London, UK. He is also the vice chairman of the Institute of Studies in Competition Law and Policy.

Noam Shemtov is a senior lecturer in intellectual property and technology law at the Centre for Commercial Law Studies (CCLS) at Queen Mary University of London, UK.

Apostolos Chronopoulos is a Lecturer in trademark law at Queen Mary University of London, UK.

This book provides a critical analysis of the interface between trademark law and competition law through a combination of practice, doctrine, and policy. The two legal regimes are at opposite ends of the scale, often without regard for the objectives and regulatory tools of the other. This book highlights the ways in which the fundamentals of trade mark law are being challenged from a competition law perspective, and how trade mark principles affect the development and application of competition law. It provides a detailed overview of jurisprudence from Europe, the United States, and Australia, adopting a comparative approach.
